Our approach

Whether you're expanding a current Pro AV system or buying a new one, Ingram Micro can help you design the right solution—at no cost to you. Our team simplifies the process, ensuring your project progresses smoothly and launches on time.

Based on your specifications, we can construct a bill of materials (BOM). Or, if you need more in-depth assistance, we can design your Pro AV solution from the ground up with our five-step process that includes:

- 1. Discuss the system objective: Explore a high-level view of the end user's characteristics and define their specific system objectives.
- 2. Develop the scope of work: Define the overall project and break it down into its components.
- 3. Check the environment: Discuss where the project will reside and what limitations may affect the installation.
- 4. Review any challenges: Explore the challenges that may be faced, including product and delivery issues, project management and integration obstacles, system commissioning and project sign off.
- 5. Finalize the solution and present a BOM: Once all issues have been addressed, the final deliverable includes the system design and final BOM.
